EDI

ELECTRONIC DATA INTERCHANGE B2B AUTOMATION

EDI is an essential tool for distribution and manufacturing businesses to communicate and exchange documents efficiently with vendors and customers across the supply chain.

How do I know if I need EDI?

The need for EDI often comes when a customer demands it. This can leave you behind in your ability to do business with key players. Or, you simply may not have the manpower to continue processing documents and correcting errors manually and are looking for an efficient and accurate solution. We recommend you take a proactive approach to defend disruptions and gain a competitive advantage, the time is now!

Tips to get started with EDI

- Evaluate the time involved, costs, and service levels of in-house solutions and managed service EDI.
- Consider ERP system set-up, connection, trading partner onboarding, project management, and ongoing support.
- Look for a low barrier to entry, simple pricing structure, and full-service and support to maximize your return on investment.
